Claims 14 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. The "join", according to applicant's disclosure, is bead 8 (page 11, lines 26 and 29) and does not include the filaments 3 that are substantially parallel to each other, noting that claims 5-8 and 12 are also consistent with this interpretation. Thus, according to the disclosure, the members that bend are the filaments rather than the joins. Thus, describing the joins as bending (claim 14, lines 1-2 and claim 15, lines 1-2) is confusing and inaccurate.

Claims 5-8 and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Taylor et al. (6,083,257). Taylor et al. disclose first and second sets of mutually counter rotating metallic filaments 2, 3 in which some or all of the filament ends are fixed together in pairs (col. 11, lines 3-6) by placing the filaments adjacent to and substantially parallel to one another (figures 4 and 5) and further comprising a join at each end, wherein some but not all of the filament ends are welded (col. 2, lines 35-37 and 54-60 and col. 13, lines 50-63), the joins extending outward radially from a main body of the stent (when the ends of the stent flare radially outwardly as described in col. 5, lines 31-50, particularly lines 31-33 and col. 11, lines 10-12). As to claims 6, 7 and 12, note col. 7, lines 5-8. As to claim 8, the proximal surface of the joins provide a shoulder (col. 3, lines 13).

Claims 14 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Taylor et al. (6,083,257). Taylor et al. fail to disclose the angle of the members increasing as the filaments extend toward the join. However, it is old and well known to form flaring ends on stents by increasing the angle of the filaments as they extend toward the ends in order to obtain the advantage of preventing the migration of the stent in the body lumen. It would have been obvious to so shape the flared ends of the Taylor et al. stent so that it too has this advantage.

Applicant's arguments filed Nov. 21, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive for the reasons set forth above.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
